2016A Consumer Expenditures

Note: For purposes of brevity, this document includes only the "X" series, which are average household expenditures. The "T" series (e.g. T00AP201) is the total expenditure (Household times the average household expenditure). All Consumer Expenditure variables are available on either an average household expenditure or total geographic area expenditure basis.

Consumer Behavior

Mediamark (MRI) Profiles

The values are absolute # of either households, adult population (18+), or adult female population (18+). The base can be identified by looking at the last character of the variable name, i.e. P or A = adult population, H = households, F = adult female population. The values are based on the current estimates.

Please note: In order to improve the interpretation of these results, we have added annotations to the variable descriptions to indicate very small () and small () sample sizes. These are invoked at roughly 1% and 10% of the total adult population respectively. For example, purchasers of 'Soccer shoes' are a relatively small proportion of the population, and the impact of a single 'yes' response can be significant with respect to the segment expected value.

Codes to some of the answers found in the MRI variables:

AC Agree Completely
 AS Agree Somewhat

DS Disagree Somewhat
 DC Disagree Completely

 DM Disagree Mostly
 DS Disagree Somewhat

 AM Agree Mostly

 VI Very Important
 NI Not Important
 AI Average importance
